UP THE LEARNING TREE
BY MARCIA VAUGHAN

Louisiana Young Readers' Choice Award Nominee 2006
Grades 3-5

Submitted by Mary Jo Kelly, School Librarian
Park Forest Elementary School, Baton Rouge

Title: Up the Learning Tree
Author: Marcia Vaughan
Illustrator: Derek Blanks
Publisher: Lee & Low Books, 2003
Pages: 32

Summary

Young Henry Bell, one of the Grismores’ slaves, has to accompany young Master Simon to and from school every day. Even though he knows that slaves are not supposed to read, he is hungry to learn how to do it. Each day, Henry tries to complete his chores so that he can go back to the schoolhouse early, climb the old sycamore tree, and watch the lessons through the window. Because he has nothing else to write on, Henry carves letters and words into the bark of the tree. When Simon stays home to avoid the fever, Henry must go to the school each day to get lessons for the young master. On his way home, he pours over each lesson to continue to learn. Miss Hattie, the teacher, catches Henry trying to take home a discarded book. She risks everything to help him learn. Even though she is discovered and driven away by the plantation owners, Henry is determined to continue to learn because he knows that education will help him escape to freedom.

Quality of the Text and Illustrations

The story, told in first person by the protagonist, Henry evokes pathos. The text is replete with messages that were crafted to allay fears without reducing the story to saccharine. (“Hugging that book’s like hugging hope.”) The lush paintings and their dream-like quality evoke “a once-upon-a-time” feeling that softens the harshness of the “life-and-death struggle” by the boy and the teacher. The color in the oil paintings emphasizes the shifting mood of the story: the lush green grass in scenes of Henry reading contrasts with the somber browns and reds of the scenes in which Henry is caught and the teacher is driven away. The final scene of Henry reading in the tree includes cool green leaves that are evocative of the growth of Henry’s education.
Awards and Best Book Lists

Best Children's Book of the Year. Bank Street College
2004 Best Picture Book Honor. Society of School Librarians International
Honorable Mention. Myers Outstanding Book Award. Gustavus Myers Center for the Study of Bigotry and Human Rights in North America
Storytelling World Award 2005. Storytelling World magazine

Author's Biography

Marcia Vaughan, former school librarian, did not begin writing until she was thirty. She is the author of several children’s picture books. She was moved to write Up the Learning Tree after reading about people who risked death to learn to read in Civil War-era slave narratives. Vaughan lives with her husband and their son in Vashon Island, Washington. (Source: Lee and Low Books)

Illustrator's Biography

Derek Blanks received a B.F.A. in 2000 from the Maryland Institute College of Art in Baltimore, where he graduated Magna cum laude. He has worked as a painter and freelance illustrator for museums, art magazines and galleries. He also worked for The Baltimore Sun. Up the Learning Tree is his first picture book. He is currently working as a graphic artist and photographer. Born in Mississippi, he now lives in College Park, Georgia near Atlanta with his wife. (Source: Lee and Low Books)

Other Titles by Marcia Vaughan

Abbie Against the Storm: The True Story of a Young Heroine and a Lighthouse
The Dancing Dragon
The Secret to Freedom
Snap!

Related Titles

The Bee Tree by Patricia Polacco
Boxes for Katje by Candace Fleming
First Day in Grapes (Pura Belpre Honor Book Illustrator (Awards)) by L. King Perez
Frederick Douglass and the Last Days of Slavery by William Miller
Freedom School, Yes! by Amy Littlesugar
Goin’ Someplace Special by Patricia McKissack
The Hard-Times Jar by Ethel Footman Smothers
Little Firefly by Terri Cohlene
Richard Wright and the Library Card by William Miller
Sweet Potato Pie by Kathleen D. Lindsey
Classroom Connections

- This book could be part of a study during Black History Month. There are literally hundreds of good sites with activities that could be used in conjunction with this book to address most language arts and social studies indicators for the grades 2-4. The Field Guide to Parenting web site gives parents and teachers ideas to develop skills in conjunction with historical explorations:

  http://www.fieldguidetoparenting.info/Featured%20Black%20History%20Month.htm

- The book is an excellent introduction to National Library Week or Children’s Book Week. Use it with Goin’ Someplace Special by Patricia McKissack and Tomás and the Library Lady/Tomás y la señora de la biblioteca by Pat Mora.

Web Sites

American Slave Narratives

   http://xroads.virginia.edu/~hyper/wpa/wpahome.html

   Short excerpts from slave narratives.

Carol Hurst’s Literature Site: Slavery in the United States

   Carol Hurst’s site on teaching about slavery. This is an excellent resource with classroom activities, booklists and web links.

Children’s Books on Slavery

   http://jhunix.hcf.jhu.edu/~plarson/smuseum/chbooks.htm

   Contains a list of related books about slavery.

Kids Click!

   http://sunsite.berkeley.edu/cgibin/searchkids.pl?keywords=slavery&searchtype=All

   Contains additional sites related to slavery.

Lee & Low Books – Booktalk with Marcia Vaughan

   Publisher site contains an interview with the author.

Lee & Low Books – Teachers

   The publisher’s resource center allows teachers to search by title, theme, and subject of a book.
The Learning Tree is one of those milestone films that one wishes were much better than it is. Parks' genius for the image comes through time and again, particularly in the opening sequence of the tornado and the horseback riders silhouetted by the sun. The milieu—rural Kansas in the 1920s—is unusual for a film focusing on racial conflict in the U.S., and that alone makes for an interesting film concept. The other big problem here seems to be flow; each brief episode seems encapsulated, with new characters popping up left and right and then disappearing and reappearing without much development. Case in point: the series of episodes after the arrest. The Learning Tree is a 1969 American drama film written and directed by Gordon Parks, a celebrated photographer. It depicts the life of Newt Winger, a teenager growing up in Cherokee Flats, Kansas, in the 1920s, and chronicles his journey into manhood that is marked by tragic events. The Learning Tree, based on Parks' 1963 semi-autobiographical novel of the same name, was the first film directed by an African-American person for a major American film studio, in this case Warner Bros.-Seven Arts. Up the Learning Tree book. Read 17 reviews from the world's largest community for readers. Henry Bell is not allowed to learn to read and write. In fact Up the Learning Tree is a beautifully illustrated work of historical fiction set in the pre-civil war south. A young slave boy repeatedly risks a severe punishment in his pursuit of literacy. This book is perfect when covering slavery or the importance of reading; a gift that if often under appreciated.